Benjamin Schwarz

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Benjamin Schwarz (born October 20, 1963<sup>[1]</sup>) is an American editor and writer. From 2000 to 2013 he was literary and national editor of the American monthly magazine The Atlantic.<sup>[2]</sup> He is currently consulting editor at large at Yale University Press<sup>[3]</sup> and the national editor of The American Conservative magazine.<sup>[4]</sup> He has written articles, essays, and reviews (<http://benjaminschwarz.org>) on an array of subjects—from fashion to the American South, from current fiction to the archaeology, from national security to architecture, from the history of slavery to the history of childhood, and from international economics to Hollywood.

Schwarz ran, and wrote a regular column for, the Atlantic's Books and Critics department, which under his editorship expanded its coverage to include popular culture and manners and mores, as well as books and ideas. The Los Angeles Times wrote that Schwarz had "reshaped the venerable magazine's book section into the shrewdest, best-written and most surprising cultural report currently on offer between slick covers."<sup>[5]</sup> The writers he recruited to the Books section included Perry Anderson, Caitlin Flanagan, Sandra Tsing Loh, Christopher Hitchens, Cristina Nehring, Joseph O'Neill, Terry Castle, Clive James, and B. R. Myers. Articles in Schwarz's section were National Magazine Award finalists or winners in the Criticism category from 2000 to 2009.<sup>[6]</sup> The Columbia Journalism Review described Schwarz as "the magazine's in-house intellectual."<sup>[7]</sup>

Before joining the Atlantic's staff, Schwarz was a national correspondent for the magazine. From 1995 to 2000 he wrote a series of provocative essays and reported articles that argued for a far more diminished global role for the United States.<sup>[8][9]</sup> He also wrote a series of pieces on historical and literary subjects. From 1995 to 1998 Schwarz was the executive editor of World Policy Journal, where his chief mission was to bolster the coverage of cultural issues, international economics, and military affairs. For several years he was a foreign policy analyst at the RAND Corporation, where he researched and wrote on American global strategy, counterinsurgency, counterterrorism, and military doctrine. At RAND Schwarz wrote a widely cited and highly critical assessment of American counterinsurgency doctrine and practice.<sup>[10]</sup> Schwarz was also a staff member of the Brookings Institution.

He holds a B.A. and an M.A. in history from Yale, where he held the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation's Mellon Fellowship in the Humanities. Schwarz was a Fulbright scholar at Magdalen College, Oxford.<sup>[1][2]</sup>

In 1999 Schwarz won the Nona Balakian Citation for Excellence in Reviewing from the National Book Critics Circle.<sup>[11]</sup> He is writing a biography of Winston Churchill, to be published by Random House,<sup>[12]</sup>

Hi Chetan,

I hope all is well. I am checking in because we have not received April rent. You currently have a balance of $6,800, not including May rent charge. In general it is our policy to send accounts that are 2 months behind in rent behind to legal. I need payment in full of $6,800 by the end of April in order to keep your account from being sent to legal. Thank you.

specifically requested an asset protection structure we would do as instructed but that did not make the incorporating law firm or trust company an “asset protection company” ).

Typically, the structure (with bank/brokerage setup) was created in our/my name (“MAP Phase 1”) and transferred to the client (the directorship, ownership or equivalent would be transferred) (“MAP Phase 2”). Once the structure was transferred, the client would fund the account (“MAP Phase 3”). If there was a mandate to do a managed account, we would proceed to manage the funds (and provide any administrative services as instructed) (“MAP Phase 4”). While the above process was standard (with clients wanting to be serviced so as to eliminate the inconveniences of procedural setup), things were always customized on a case by case basis.

I will also note as part of this background that ThinkStrategy corresponded or dealt with hundreds of sophisticated counterparties (institutional investors, qualified retail investors, institutional and retail advisors or their clients, MAP clients, potential clients and/or each of the their one to many entities), and hundreds of service providers (between our Management Company/Funds/MAP service providers, and underlying sub-funds service providers for the fund-of-funds products).

5. The SEC’s argument that I have purposefully sought to insulate my assets from Court’s reach and that I have created an elaborate system to provide the appearance of insolvency is simply false. The truth of the matter is that I went insolvent due to the 3 years during which ThinkStrategy received no fees from its core fund, and covered all the operating and infrastructure expenses of the Funds and the Firm – depleting all company resources and placing me in debt. My former attorney provided a detailed report based on bank statements of this ‘Benefit to Investor Analysis’ to this Court (even though the attorney was presenting a worst case scenario to show disgorgement at its worst taking the SEC ‘claims’ as a given, the results were nonetheless a very significant net benefit to investors). Very significant operating and business expenses for the Funds and Firm were in fact expended over a 3 year period depleting the firms resources and placing me in debt. Expenses that would otherwise have been charged to the Funds by any liquidator. I did do everything I could for the firm’s investors during the worst financial and banking crisis in US history since 1929, including work on a no fee voluntary basis for 3 years (which is something I believe most other managers would never have done). Further, the SEC theory that I exercise control over any entity, either domestically or internationally, is false. The SEC’s theory that I began actively searching for an off-shore asset protection scheme to hinder creditors after the Motion to Dismiss on the Schwarz case was denied in March 2010 is false. The MAP had several other structuring projects prior to this date (as can be seen by the Plaintiff’s own exhibits). The truth of the matter is that ThinkStrategy did not have any meaningful assets left by that point to protect, and what was left was utilized to continue to pay for operating and infrastructure costs of the Funds. Last, as a matter already on record, the SEC had knowingly used partial or contorted information to calculate returns for the TS Capital Fund A and B Class (“Capital Fund”) in their claims. The Capital Fund’s reported returns were subsequently proven fully accurate from data in the SEC’s possession. While I am not allowed to deny the SEC’s prior claims, I will note that I did not have the resources to defend against them - resulting in the default judgment they have put into collections. I feel like I have been harassed and bullied in general, and now again am being subjected to the same for default judgment
